Coordinated Behavioral Health Services Partners with Unite Us to Address Behavioral Health and Social Needs in the Hudson Valley

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 2, 2023

Coordinated Behavioral Health Services \(CBHS\), the most comprehensive behavioral health independent practice association in the Hudson Valley, and Unite Us, the nation's leading software company that enables cross-sector collaboration to improve people's health and well-being, are partnering to build a connected ecosystem of health and social care in the Hudson Valley.

“At Coordinated Behavioral Health, we recognize that the key to helping individuals make progress in their health care journey is to connect them to the health and social care needs,” said Stephanie Madison, President & CEO of the Mental Health Association of Rockland County, and CBHS Board President and Chair. “By using Unite Us, we can ensure individuals throughout the Hudson Valley are linked with the programs and services they most need, and organizations can measure and monitor the effectiveness of those programs in improving health.”

This strategic partnership between Unite Us and the CBHS network of 30 behavioral health and social care organizations aims to better connect people in need with community-based resources, thus removing barriers and closing gaps in care. Through the New York State Home and Community Based Services (HCBS) – Community Oriented Recovery and Empowerment (CORE) Services Infrastructure Grant, the CBHS network and community partners will be connected through Unite Us' shared technology platform, enabling them to send and receive secure, electronic referrals to address people's social needs including nutrition, housing, transportation, and care management among others.

“The partnership between CBHS and Unite Us will help connect people in need with community-based resources more efficiently, leading to improved outcomes for the individuals and communities that we serve through the CBHS network of organizations,” said Ruthanne Becker, Senior Vice President of Rehabilitation Services at the Mental Health Association of Westchester. “The collaboration will also improve accessibility to primary care and health services across the Hudson Valley region, enhancing the quality of life.

“The Unite Us and CBHS partnership comes at just the right time in advance of the 1115 waiver and will be essential to the goals of the waiver,” said Nicole Willner, Chief Operating Officer of CBHS. “The integrated data capacity and care coordination abilities offered by the Unite Us platform will enhance the integration of behavioral health and social care services that will be essential to the goals of the waiver.”

In addition to the infrastructure grant, Unite Us will play a crucial role in coordinating services across the entire Hudson Valley region. This approach will enhance accessibility to primary care and healthcare services, ultimately resulting in better health outcomes and improved quality of life.

“We are thrilled to partner with Coordinated Behavioral Health Services to better connect people in need to the care they need,” said Marc Natale, New York Community and Customer Success Director at Unite Us. “Our ‘technology-connects-community’ approach will improve health outcomes across the Hudson Valley Region. This partnership is a crucial step in achieving the goals of the Medicaid 1115 waiver, and we look forward to the positive impact it will have.”
